PRESERVING SAFE SALSA

By Carol Ann Burtness
Food Science Educator
U of M Extension Service
Americans love salsa! Canning salsa is a fun, easy way to preserve tomatoes for year-round enjoyment. Tomato-based salsa recipes are usually a mixture of tomatoes, onions, peppers and spices. When canning salsa, use only high-quality tomatoes. Canning is not a way to use overripe or damaged tomatoes, or tomatoes from dead or frost-killed vines because these may cause the product to spoil and be unsafe to eat.

The type of tomato you use in your salsa will affect the end result. Italian plum-style or paste tomatoes will produce thicker salsas than slicing tomatoes. If you use slicing tomatoes, you can thicken your salsa by adding tomato paste or by draining off some of the liquid after you chop the tomatoes. Never add flour or cornstarch to salsa before canning because an unsafe product may result.

Peppers add color and heat to salsa recipes. Use high quality peppers, and do not increase the total amount of peppers in any recipe. However, you can substitute one type of pepper for another, or use canned chilies in place of fresh. Hot peppers are usually small and give a hot taste to salsa. The oils in hot peppers can cause burns, so it's a good idea to wear gloves when you cut or dice these peppers. And never touch your face, particularly near your eyes.

Mild peppers are usually larger than hot peppers. You can substitute a mild or bell pepper when the recipe calls for long green chilies. Typically, the skin of the long green chilies is removed by heating the peppers. But, if you are finely chopping the peppers, you do not need to remove the skin.

Do not attempt to can a recipe that has not been tested for safety, because food spoilage or a foodborne illness may result. If you are using an untested recipe or like to be creative by adding your own amount of ingredients, freeze the salsa and thaw in the refrigerator before serving.

Adding acid is necessary to safely preserve salsa. Follow recipe directions for adding vinegar or bottle lemon juice to home-canned salsa. Do not substitute vinegar for lemon juice unless this substitution is given in the recipe, or an unsafe product may result.

For more information on salsa, check out the University of Minnesota Extension Service Food Safety Web site at <http://www.extension.umn.edu/foodsafety> and click on "Food Preservation."

tension are collaborating on the Wasp Watchers program, which uses volunteers to look for and monitor the smoky winged beetle bandits (Cerceris fumipennis).

The beetle bandits are ground nesting wasps that are docile and do not sting humans. Female wasps collect wood boring beetles, including EAB, to feed their young.

"Early detection of emerald ash borer is difficult," said Jonathan Osthus, EAB Biocontrol coordinator at the MDA. "By monitoring the wasps and collecting beetles they may have gathered, we can locate new EAB finds and gather more information to guide EAB management."

The beetle bandits like hard-packed, sandy soil near human activity. That makes Minnesota's baseball fields ideal conditions for their nests. Over 100 volunteers, called Wasp Watchers, have adopted and are monitoring beetle bandit colonies in baseball fields across the state. But more volunteers are needed.

"We're asking volunteers to either search for new smoky winged beetle bandit sites in their community or adopt a known site and collect their beetle prey," said Jennifer Schultz, Wasp Watchers Program Coordinator with U of M Extension. "Together, this wasp and Wasp Watchers can help us fight emerald ash borer."

Minnesotans can join the Wasp Watchers program by going to <http://www.myminnesota.woods.umn.edu/eab/waspwatchers/>, or by contacting Jennifer Schultz directly at 612-301-8310 or schultzj@umn.edu.

The Wasp Watchers program is one of several joint MDA and U of M projects funded through a grant by the Environment and Natural Resources Trust Fund as recommended by the Legislative-Citizens Commission on Minnesota Resources.

EAB is one of America's most destructive tree pests. Its larvae kill ash trees by tunneling into the wood and feeding on the tree's nutrients. The insect first arrived in Minnesota in 2009 and is now found in eight counties: Anoka, Dakota, Fillmore, Hennepin, Houston, Olmsted, Ramsey, and Winona. More information on EAB can be found at www.mda.state.mn.us/eab.
