Beating the Winter Blues

A common report we hear lately from patients in our physical therapy clinic is reduced energy and motivation and a general feeling of being done with winter. It's cold and snowy and people do not want to leave their home. Sometimes these symptoms are due to Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD) or "the winter blues."

Winter SAD is more prevalent in northern latitudes where sunlight is decreased in the winter. Signs of SAD include feelings of depression, moodiness, lack of energy and motivation, and anxiety. These symptoms generally increase with lack of sunlight and improve with the return of spring and longer periods of sunlight. SAD can be disrupting, but there are some things you can do to decrease the winter blues. Get Outside!

This can help provide your body with more natural light. The key to staying warm is dressing properly:

- Layers:
 - Base layer (closest to your skin): Material designed to be moisture-wicking. Look for materials such as polyester or wool.
 - Mid-layer: Materials designed for warmth. Look for materials such as wool, fleece, or down.
 - Outer-layer: Materials designed to block wind and water. Look for labels that say wind or water resistant.
- Wear a hat, scarf, and mittens, keeping the cold wind from touching bare skin.
- Wear wool socks in your waterproof shoes or boots.

Get Moving!

Research has shown that physical exercise can help increase energy and decrease symptoms of SAD. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommend 30 minutes of physical activity 5 days per week. This simply means doing something above your normal activity level, getting your heart pumping and burning more calories.

Exercise is beneficial for the body and mind. Exercise releases serotonin, a hormone in the brain that decreases feelings of depression and anxiety. As an added benefit, exercise increases self-esteem, making people feel better about themselves.

Here are a few great outdoor activities to try this winter: Brisk Walking, Ice Skating, Shoveling, Snowshoeing, Sledding, Cross Country Skiing, Downhill Skiing, Hiking

If you Get Outside! and Get Moving! you can fight against the winter blues and before you know it spring will be here! If you find you continue to struggle with depression, Get Help! You are not alone and there are options for treatment that you can discuss with your primary provider.

How low can your home heat costs go?

Heat your whole home for far less money than fuel oil, propane, natural gas or even off-peak electric rates with a WoodMaster outdoor wood furnace. You also stay insulated from fluctuating prices of other fuel sources while dramatically lowering your costs for home heat.

We also provide HeatLink radiant in-floor heating.
