StarTribune Article Corrects Falsehoods

“Single-payer health care system would cut costs for Minnesotans
Minnesota GOP ad campaigns are cherry-picking 2012 reports’ results and misleading voters.

By Dane Smith, October 23, 2018

“In 2012, Growth & Justice released two reports containing more than 90 pages of detailed supporting data showing that Minnesotans and their employers would save almost 9 percent on total health care spending if the state had one public system for financing universal, high-quality health care (also known as “single payer” or “Medicare for All.”)

“While we’re pleased that some Minnesota Republican candidates, six years later, are finding these studies to be a credible source, and are footnoting our research widely in campaign materials, their selective focus on just one facet of the reports is egregious cherry-picking that creates an utter falsehood.

“The misrepresentation began with an August Star Tribune op-ed by House Taxes Committee Chairman... [titled] “Editorial Counterpoint: Don’t fall for the ruse on Democrats’ health care intentions,” Aug. 29.

“Since then, similar distortions are popping up in campaign literature all over the state, including a recent flier attacking Minnesota House candidate.... That brochure footnotes research we commissioned with our partners in the study at the Lewin Group, a highly respected health care industry consulting firm, and alleges that single-payer would “make health care more expensive” and “make health care worse.”

“To the exact contrary, our reports stated clearly and repeatedly that by shifting to a single system of public financing—and eliminating the premiums paid to a bewildering and inefficient hodgepodge of private, public and nonprofit insurers—Minnesotans would save 8.8 percent on total health care spending. We further calculated the savings at about $1,240 per family annually, and estimated that employers who were providing health insurance would save $1,214 per employee per year, and that annual savings could be as high as 12 percent to 33 percent in later years.

“And we made this assertion: “The economic savings would be significant; the potential health benefits are immeasurable.”
