Change continues at Graphic with new staff, technology

By Sarah Ziebarth
Staff Writer

A few weeks ago, a small ad calling for a Newspaper Production and Sales Associate at our local newspaper was advertised. It was the Lake City job I'd been looking for. Since wrapping up my college experience earlier this year, I was doubtful of finding something that would allow me to utilize the art and technology degrees I'd graduated with, not to mention being lucky enough to get to stay here in my beautiful hometown.

"Initially we were hoping to hire a single person who would have wide-ranging responsibilities," editor Andrew Eggenberger explains. "Fortunately, we had several excellent applicants, two of whom had very strong skill sets that were complementary. We decided to offer positions to both and tailor the job descriptions accordingly."

Enter Amy Henderson, who was hired alongside me for the same role, but has a lot more expertise in advertising. Amy and her family have been living in Lake City for a little over a year, although the Hegseths, her mom's side of the family, have been in the area for much longer. She originally graduated from Luther College with degrees in art and communication before returning to school for a degree in advertising and graphic design.

"I've been visiting family in Lake City my whole life and it's always felt like home," says Amy. "After living in many different places, I feel so fortunate to be able to raise my family here. I'm excited to serve this amazing community by joining the team at the Graphic!"

Other major changes to The Graphic and Shopper have come in the forms of software, hardware, and office renovations. Computer applications that hadn't been updated for 23 years have been replaced with modern subscriptions. Carpet tiles have been laid on the concrete floor and new paint was put on the walls. Just this last week, eight shiny new monitors were wheeled in

My coworkers Andrew Eggenberger and Dean Schumacher have been extremely gracious during this process, making Amy and I feel welcome. Andrew started at the Graphic in 2008 and has been the editor since January of 2017. Dean, of course, has been here for around 30 years, with his title of publisher coming into play in 2002. Change can be scary, but they've been incredibly open to the adjustments being made.

"Hometown Press has followed through on the commitments it made when it purchased The Graphic and Shopper earlier this year to invest in people and technology," Andrew says. "Sarah and Amy bring skills and energy to the Graphic that we believe will benefit readers and advertisers. We're very excited about the next phase."

Further updates to the Graphic building, website, and workflow are still underway, with plans for expanding our marketing operations being the next step. We are all eager to continue serving the Lake City community through print and digital formats, alike, and hope to share these improvements soon. It is an honor to be part of such a treasured piece of this small town's history, and we thank you for your dedication and support!

A Brief History

Of the antiques that still stand in Lake City today, there are few as humble as the one you currently hold in your hands: The Lake City Graphic. Although it wasn't known as such until 1936, it can trace its origins back to 1861. It was the second newspaper to be established in Lake City, and at that time was titled The Weekly Lake City Times (1861-1865). Over the years it has merged, changed names – The Lake City Leader (1865-1881), The Review (1881-1882), The Lake City Graphic-Republican (1910-1936) – or exchanged hands multiple times.

The Schumacher family proudly owned The Lake City Graphic and Shopper for 55 years, with Dennis and Marian Schumacher originally purchasing half interest in the business in 1970 and then fully in 1992. They eventually sold to their sons and daughters-in-law, Terry, Shari, Dean, and Mary Schumacher in 2002.

The four of them have run the Graphic until March 1 of this year. Now, former Lake City mayor, Mark Nichols, along with his daughter and son-in-law, Emily and Justin Hawryluk, have taken the paper under their wing, and it should come as no surprise that many updates have arrived with them.

Shortly after the change of ownership, Janet Borcharding was hired as the Graphic's new bookkeeper. She's lived in several places throughout the US, including Tucson, Ariz., and North Bend, Wash. In 2017, she settled into Red Wing with her late husband, where she still lives with her two dogs, Leilani and Sadie.

At the end of August, Terry retired from his position as publisher, and, more recently, graphic designer and ad salesperson Doreen Schuchard retired, as well.
